An open letter from Gary Biba:

If you're looking for a professional to help with any flying related task; I'm happy you're here. I've flown for over 30 years, merging together the best practices I've learned from various instructors, examiners and colleagues along the way. This gives me the experience to provide training and services of the highest caliber.

My passion is flying and helping others reach that next step in their aviation journey. I provide a learning environment that is varied and easygoing, yet rooted in a solid respect for safety. I've been flying three decades without an accident or incident and it's important to me to pass along this legacy of safety to my students.

I offer my customers the benefit of a professional, peer-to-peer relationship, with training and services that are customized to their specific aviation goals and timetable. I tend to form lasting relationships, with many students returning for additional instruction and advice on a regular basis. My typical client owns an aircraft or plans to buy one, and it's common for me to assist in selecting the right aircraft for purchase.

Please visit the rest of my site. Contact me if you sense we could be a good fit.

Best wishes,
